

Students' Feedbacks

Communication with foreigners is not just about the language, it lies in further aspects such as behavior, cultural sensitivity, choice of words and tolerance. In my opinion, it is a very long way to learn it. Thanks to this occasion we gained a piece of experience.

In the future, just these experiences (Erasmus, Albir etc.) will help us with employment. Today, the market is full of ambitious graduates and it is necessary for us to be able to be different.

Participants were also given examples of how difficult might be international cooperation and teamwork if different attitudes and behavior are not taken into account.

(Belbin questionnaire experience) I underestimated myself in some areas and other people see me differently. This could certainly help me to develop my potential.

It's always nice to travel and learn about different cultures, however the benefit of being provided with explanations and reasons in a very entertaining and enjoyable way was priceless.

I learnt much about Spanish culture even much more than when I visited Spain for the first time. Spanish people are open-minded and more talkative but not very good in English. They need to get better language skills.

Lenka

I've never been in a restaurant where a live performance was done and I regret it now. This was another nice touch.

Jakub

Those Spanish lessons really got me into that language and I'd like to take some classes here in the Czech Republic.
